Home Life of Stars Of Photoplay Give Clue to Their Personality.

It has occasionally happened durhis on far more familiar terms of ersonal intimacy with the motion icture actors and actresses than are, find something written in column that interests them nough to cause them to write to he editor. And sometimes the leters thus prompted are of such unusual interest to other motion picture enthusiasts that we have encourged the correspondents to write their ideas a little more fully so that they can be utilized in this column for the information and enertainment of others. There is nothplay patron as the little intimate, personal stories of the actors and actresses that find their way to print occasionally. The screen artists are far removed from the people who entertained by them so frequently and so thoroughly and their personal characteristics are a thing entirely apart from their screen activities. It is difficult indeed to get in touch with the home life of the vell known actresses, for instance. It is for this reason that the following series of little stories is particutrly appealing. It was prepared by Miss Edna Wright of this city, who is a writer of some note in photo-play circles and who enjoys personal endship, to the degree of intimacy, with many of the people about whom she writes. Her stories, therefore, are not only pleasant reading, but have the authority of being within her personal knowledge. Wright's contribution follows: "Has it ever occurred to you that heroes and heroines seen on the as yourself and enjoy 'home life' as ou do?" One finds it hard to imagine them in any walk of life but that of entertainer of the public, yet after a busy day before the camera hese film stars run away from the lights to enjoy "home life." "Little Mary" Pickford, probably the most popular of the stars, is as lovely a hostess as one could wish to see. It ive apartment filled with guests any evening, where being a hero or heroine is forgotten, as her friends revel in an evening's fun. But best of all at these parties, is the da'nty supper served at the end, superin-tended by "Little Mary" herself. Being a fortunate intruder at one of "feasts." I was glad to find that the favorite of photoplay patrons all over the world is not merely mechanical toy, doomed to smile only at the camera, but is a delight-

Lott'e Pickford, another "silent" actress and a sister of Mary, is an ardent admirer of sports, and after her day's work is completed she runs away for a swim. Her love for the water has made Miss Pickford a wonderful swimmer, and it is a leasure to see her exhibiting fancy living. Motoring is another of her avorite recreations, and she manages her seven-passenger car with the skill that only a good driver can. to one who hasn't already heard the secret would imagine that Lillian Gish is a wonderful cook. Like 'Little Mary," Lillian finds home very pleasant, and after a strenuous day at the studio, she runs away from the sham to take part in the real. With her sister Dorothy she concocts dainty dishes that would make a French chef jealous, and bread like mother used to make" is her specialty. She is also a lover of good books, and a well-stocked I'brary is the delight of her heart. Harold Lockwood, of the Famous Players, is one of the film heroes who finds time for other amusements aside from entertaining the ubl'c. In his early schooling Mr. ockwood acquired a fondness for athletics, and he has never outgrown that fondness. He is an equestrian of creat skill, and spare time away rom the studio is devoted to that branch of sport. Alice Joyce is a clever seamstress and one would search long to find another so skilled with the needle. M'ss Joyce's gowns are always feature of a Kalem picture, and the surerising part is that she herself s the designer and maker of these costumes. It is while spending a gulet evening at home that the Kalem star devotes her time to sewing, and, as she expresses it, she loves to plan and figure a

James Kirkwood, actor and director of the Famous Players, enjoys a reat many different forms of enterta'nment, but the greater part of his time he devotes to managing the New York Screen Club." president of this famous organizaton, and proud to give his time and energy toward its success.

Organ Recital and a Private View of Film

A group of local motion picture exhibitors were the guests of Charles G. Powell, of the Thanhouser Film Company, and Manager Crandall, of Crandall's Theater, last evening at a pipe private exhibition of the first episode of the new serial film, "Zudora," by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, which is to The organist was Prof. Awe, of Chicago, and the recital was in the nature Bartola instrument that has just been installed at Crandall's. This can be ments of an orchestra, a pipe organ, a riano, and the various noises needed It may be used as one or the other or all at the same time, at the will of

The new serial film, "Zudora," is to be in the nature of a series of twenty detective stories, each installment being a complete story in itself. Marguerite Snow has the part of Zudora, the heroine. James Cruze has a character part. He is an East Indian mystic, fortune teller, and colver of mysteries. Harry Benham plays the part of the lover of Zudora. The heroine is the niece of the mystic, and is the heiress of a large fortune. Her uncle wants to obtain the fortune. He forbids her marriage to the man she loves, who is a young lawyer, unless she can solve the next twenty cases brought to him. The twenty cases are the twenty installments of the serial that is to be presented, the first of which is contained in the first two reels of the film. The remainder will be shown in two reel installments, one of which will be
